Practical Solutions for your Water and Wastewater Needs

Water. . .

it's essential to our well-being, economic development, natural resource management, fire protection and our quality of life.

If you're facing a water or wastewater challenge, the team at Tidewater Utilities, Inc. can help.

Tidewater is part of the Middlesex Water family of companies and benefits from over a century of professional water management expertise and decades of proven performance in engineering, construction, maintenance, management, operation and ownership of water and wastewater systems. We understand the big picture. We know asset and wastewater management and can work with you to deliver a sustainable water supply that complies with stringent regulation. We also know that energy is a major factor in water and wastewater operations and can offer solutions that can help you address rising energy costs amidst the backdrop of uncertain climate change.

Our professional staff of scientists, engineers and state-licensed and certified operators are experts in their fields. Their proven performance in governmental, regulatory and environmental matters can help you navigate a host of challenging state permitting and approval processes. Almost all of our operators are also dually licensed in water and wastewater treatment and have been recognized for outstanding service to the industry on both a state and national level.
